

GOT MILK?

DESIGN Keeping abreast of modern lifestyles, Danish company iiamo has come up with a range of products for contemporary parents. Its first product is a sharp-looking $46 bottle that was created by Cairo-born, New York-based designer Karim Rashid. A heating cartridge warms the milk to the correct temperature in just four minutes, so junior can be fed anywhere, anytime. CF

www.iiamo.com

Bright ideas in bright colors.

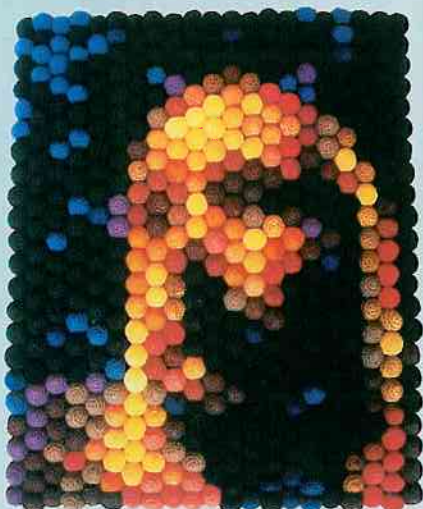

SPRING HAS SPRUNG

EXHIBIT The annual spring exhibition at Liljevalchs gallery is a must for any ambitious artist, whether they're up-and-coming or already a household name. Get a piece of art shown here and you have a pretty good chance of getting the attention you crave.

Some 40,000 visitors make sure this is one of the best – and first – much-longed-for signs of spring in Stockholm. TS

The Spring Exhibition 2009. Liljevalchs konsthall. Djurgårdsvägen 60, Stockholm. Until March 29. Tel: +46 8 508 31 330. www.liljevalchs.stockholm.se Mötet (The Meeting), knitted yarn balls on canvas, by Emmeli Kidd, born in 1982.

A fusion of British, Italian and Norwegian influences.

LONDON CALLING

EATERY Oslo restaurant SW20 has a giant portrait of Michael Caine painted directly on the wall. But there are also more subtle hints that the new hangout is infatuated with the swinging London of the 1960s and 1970s: the name SW20 is the zip code for owner Dominic Gorham's childhood address in Wimbledon. The kitchen, leaning more toward the Italian, is getting rave reviews, as are the drinks. IMH

SW20. Solligata 2, Oslo. Tel. +47 22 55 00 60. www.sw20.no